

What's new at PBE

We are excited to update you with a number of new developments here at Pro Bono Economics. Our team has grown, with the recent hire of Clare Thorp, our Director of Public Affairs, who will be expanding our communications function and policy work.

We also have some sad news to share: our Fundraising and Communications Manager, Fiona Ramsay, left PBE at the end of February. Fiona has been at PBE for over 2 years and will be missed, both within the organisation and across our network. We wish Fiona all the best in her global adventures!

2018 Annual Lecture

We are delighted to announce that this years' annual lecture will be taking place at The Royal Society on the 28th of March. This year, we will see Dr David Halpern, Chief Executive of the Behavioural Insights Team, offer insights into education and social mobility. Also speaking will be a panel of experts, chaired by Lord Gus O'Donnell.

To register for this exciting event, please click here.

Project updates

The Trussell Trust

Götz Kunze and Sanjay Raja provided expert advice to The Trussell Trust, enabling them to collect the right data to conduct an impact assessment in the future.

Making the Leap

Leanne Stickland's report for Making the Leap proposes several recommendations and ideas surrounding the prioritisation of outcomes, data collection and method modification.

Do you know an economist who could help us?

Share this with a friend or colleague who would be great at volunteering their expertise to help charities.

Volunteering with us

Copyright © 2018 fiona.ramsay@probonoeconomics.com, All rights reserved.

Want to change how you receive these emails?
You can update your preferences or unsubscribe from this list

